Saarinen's Quest A Memoir

Joining Eero Saarinen's office as a designer and growing into the role of in-house photographer, Richard Knight captured hundreds of images of the behind-the-scenes process. From 1957 to 1961, Saarinen developed his building ideas through large-scale models and drawings. During this time Knight served as a photographer and documentary of the unwieldy constructions, allowing Saarinen to judiciously present his concepts to clients.

Saarinen is well known for the modernist Gateway Arch in St. Louis and Knight's photographs are a unique personal account of the process, culture, and history of Saarinen's office. The book carries a foreword by Cesar Pelli, and a contextual essay by architect, Pierluigi Serraino. A traveling retrospective of Saarinen's work will culminate at Yale in 2010.
