William Turnbull, Jr. Buildings in the Landscape

This monograph chronicles twenty of Turnbull's projects beginning with the Sea Ranch condominium (with MLTW) and ending with his family's own weekend retreat, Teviot Springs Vineyard. All but one of the projects (Sea Ranch Athletic Club) are residential, which reflects the nature of Turnbull's career. He was an architect who strived not to design monuments with a signature style, but instead created wonderful places that fit within their respective landscapes.

Turnbull's buildings contain innate beauty, sensitivity to site, and the ability to bring common, conventional construction to a high art. Morley Baer's black and white photography is powerful and deftly captures the wonderful subtleties in Turnbull's sometimes simple and conventional structures.

The book contains essays by Mary Griffen (Turnbull's wife and business partner), William Stout, Mitchell Schwarzer, and Donlyn Lyndon, and others.
